

From a small town to a PhD: a retrospective on the graduate school experience and research

Please Join Us to Hear
Tales of Life in Graduate School!
Melissa Kistler, Lehigh University
Wednesday October 8, 2008, 7-8 pm
Boehm Science Building Room 261

Four years ago, Melissa Kistler was a Kutztown University undergraduate student like you. Now she's working on her PhD in a high powered research institution. Is life in grad school like being a minnow in a shark tank? A slave in the salt mines? A professional scientist working for cheap? Come hear the real story of what life is like in graduate school studying science!

She is returning home to speak to the Kutztown community to share stories of her experiences as a graduate student at a research university.

Everyone is welcome!

Kutztown Women in Science Project
<http://faculty.kutztown.edu/friehauf/wisp>

