OVERVIEW:

For more than two centuries, the ideals of liberty and equality have stood at the center of American political life. In his brief address at Gettysburg, Abraham Lincoln tells of a nation, “conceived in liberty and dedicated to the proposition that all men are created equal.” For Lincoln, the fate of the nation, then amidst a great civil war, would turn upon “a new birth of freedom” that would insure that “government of the people, by the people, and for the people shall not perish from the earth.” Whether that vision has been fulfilled is today a matter of some contention. For most of the century following the Civil War, America was two nations, one black, one white, separate and unequal. A series of momentous legal, political, and social changes during the second half of the 20th century brought the nation closer to Lincoln’s vision than it had ever been. Yet as the 21st century unfolds, the struggle for true equality continues.

So, too, some see liberty imperiled in a post-9/11 America still gripped by a palpable fear of terrorism. President Bush has said that terrorists attack America because they hate our freedom. His critics charge that his administration has responded to terrorism by curbing our constitutionally protected liberties. Such conflicts have been common in times of war, and civil liberties have historically been among war’s many casualties. Our times have proven no different. What is different this time is that the technology and legal basis for intrusion upon civil liberties has never been greater. This combination of law and technology has brought us to a point where what we read, write, and, in some ways even what we think, can be readily monitored by the government and private corporations. In short, the fight for freedom has seldom been more pointed.

The focus of this course is the evolution of American civil liberties and civil rights. Grounded in the guarantees of the Bill of Rights and the Fourteenth Amendment to the Constitution, our rights and liberties are largely a function of the decisions of the United States Supreme Court, and the ways it has interpreted founding principles in the face of profound challenges and changing times. We will trace the development of constitutional law on issues such as: the right to worship and believe as one chooses; the right to be free from government imposing religion on citizens; the right to speak freely; the right to associate with those one chooses; the right to publish and communicate; the right to be free from unreasonable searches and seizures; the right to a fair trial; and the right to be free from discrimination. We will also consider a right with profound implications that does not appear anywhere in the Constitution, but that the Supreme Court has held is so essential to ordered liberty that it must be recognized: the right to privacy. At the same time, our rights are not unlimited. We will explore the areas where the Court has held that the exercise of one’s rights crosses the boundaries of permissible conduct: when, for instance, speech and press become obscenity, libel or threats to national security; when the free exercise of religion or right against unreasonable search and seizure must give way to what the Court has seen as the government’s compelling interest in prosecuting the war on drugs; and when efforts to overcome a legacy of discrimination in the past become reverse discrimination in the present.
COURSE OBJECTIVES:

* Learn the current status of evolving constitutional law pertaining to essential civil liberties and rights of the American people, demonstrated by objective examination and effective participation in various class assignments.

* Develop basic analytical and communications skills appropriate to the study of constitutional law and legal reasoning as demonstrated by effective participation in class discussions and various class assignments.

* Consider in some detail specific theoretical approaches to critical issues of constitutional rights, as demonstrated by objective examination and effective performance in various class assignments.

* Encourage students to apply the theories and concepts of the academic study of constitutional law to the current political and legal environment as demonstrated by effective contributions to class discussions and performance on class assignments.

* Help students develop their ability to work productively and at a high level with others in a group environment as demonstrated by effective participation and performance in Supreme Court simulations in class.

COURSE REQUIREMENTS:

Several in-class quizzes, participation in class discussions and activities and a written mock Supreme Court opinion.

GRADING:

Grades will be awarded in terms of the percentage of total points each student earns.

In-Class Quizzes and Final Exam (5 or 10 points each)

There are eight in-class quizzes and a final exam scheduled for this class. Quizzes and the final may consist of a combination of multiple-choice and short answer questions. The material will be drawn directly from the class readings, discussions, lectures, and current events pertaining to civil liberties, civil rights, and the United States Supreme Court as discussed in class and as reported in the New York Times. Quiz items will be designed to allow you to demonstrate your deep and detailed mastery of class materials. You must bring your own scantron forms to class. Failure to do so will result in a 10-percent penalty and your quiz will not be returned before the end of the semester. The instructor reserves the right to correct any erroneously scored items or improperly recorded scores with correct values; under no circumstances will any misscored items be counted as correct after quizzes have been returned to students if any erasure marks appear on the item in question.

Mock Supreme Court Opinion (30 points)

Each student is required to prepare a typewritten mock Supreme Court opinion presenting their holding and reasoning on a case that is currently before the United States Supreme Court to be assigned by the instructor during the semester. Opinions must address the major competing claims at issue in the case as presented in the written briefs submitted the Court by the litigants and the amicus curiae briefs of interested parties. Students will have two opportunities to submit their opinions. The first date will be announced in class; it is likely to fall between mid-March and early-April. The second date (involving a different case) will be the final day of regular classes, Friday, April 24. Students who submit an opinion on the first date will have the opportunity to also submit one on the second date, with the higher of the two scores counting toward the student’s grade.

In-class Assignments/Participation

Over the course of the semester, 15 points will be awarded for class participation and completion of various in-class assignments. Students who earn all 15 points will also earn a two-point bonus toward their final grade.
Optional Journal/Portfolio

Students can complete a journal/portfolio of entries pertaining to constitutional law, civil liberties and civil rights, based on events and experiences that occur during this semester. Journal/portfolios should consist of copies of articles from the New York Times relevant to concepts in the readings, lectures and other course activities; and typewritten responses of approximately one to two double-spaced pages to each article. Journals will be evaluated in terms of their ability to integrate and extend class concepts in depth and detail. As a general rule, portfolios comprised of two-page entries score higher than those comprised of one-page entries. Each portfolio must include at least seven entries. Up to two entries may relate to conversations or experiences students have had relevant to the course materials. Portfolios should be neat and well organized; unprofessional work will be marked lower. Up to 10 points toward the final grade may be earned from this assignment. Optional journal/portfolios are due in class on Friday, April 24.

Make-up Assignments

There will be no make-up assignments for unexcused absences. Acceptable excuses (medical or personal emergencies and university-related business) must be provided to the instructor before the assignment is due and in writing to be considered. Students who are unable to complete an assignment for legitimate reasons that do not qualify as excused under college guidelines, and who notify the instructor before the assignment is due, may, at the discretion of the instructor, turn in late assignments for partial credit.

NOTE: Make-up tests and assignments will not be returned before the end of the semester. Make-up tests and assignments may differ from those given in class in terms of both content and form.

Penalties for Late Assignments

Assignments turned in on the day they are due but after assignments were collected in class will face a five-percent penalty. Each additional late day will accrue an additional ten percent deduction. Electronic submission of assignments will not be accepted except at the discretion of and by the invitation of the instructor.

NOTE: If a student misses an exam or assignment due date, late assignment penalties apply for each day the student fails to notify the instructor and discuss a make-up exam or submission of late work.

ELECTRONIC COMMUNICATION:

If you wish to send a message to me please include a recognizable subject line. Doing so allows me to instantly recognize your message as important and distinguishes it from the many messages from strange e-mail addresses that arrive on a daily basis, and facilitates a prompt response from me. If you send me an e-mail message and do not receive a prompt response, please do not hesitate to send a follow-up. While I try to answer each e-mail, it can be easy to accidentally overlook any particular message.

A web page has also been set up for this class. Important course information will be posted there along with links to other relevant web sites. The URL is:

Students are responsible for monitoring and contributing to class electronic communication.
CLASSROOM ETIQUETTE

Students are expected to observe all rules of proper classroom conduct. In order to insure an appropriate environment conducive to learning there are three rules governing behavior in the classroom that you must be aware of:

* Use of electronic devices of any kind is not permitted in class. Students with special needs should discuss accommodations with the instructor.

* Please refrain from talking, eating, leaving your cell phone ringers on, or other disruptive activity during class. Even one or two conversations quickly create distractions for other students and the instructor.

* Please do not leave class early, or get up and leave and come back during class. If you must do so, tell the instructor before hand and arrange to sit near the door so your exit will be less noticeable.

Serious or repeated violations of these rules may result in a request that the offending individual(s) leave the classroom. Grading penalties (up to a half-letter grade for first-time offenders and a full letter-grade for recidivists) may be imposed at the discretion of the instructor.

POLICY ON ACADEMIC ETHICS AND HONESTY

If a student has plagiarized or cheated in a course, the instructor may (in consultation with the Department Chairperson and the Dean) determine that the student be dismissed from the course and given a grade of “F”. The student forfeits all privileges of withdrawal from the course.

Plagiarism is stealing and passing off (the ideas, words, work, themes, reports, drawings, laboratory notes, computer programs or other products of another) as one’s own. In short, it is using a created production without crediting the source. The surest way to avoid plagiarism is to provide proper citation to all works quoted directly or otherwise indirectly borrowed from. Proper citations include the title, date, and author of the work. If you are not familiar with the formatting of bibliographic citations, please consult a writer’s style guide or manual. An excellent online guide to citation can be found on the internet at:

http://www.libs.uga.edu/ref/turabian.html

Guides for citing online materials specifically can be found on the web at:

http://webster.commnet.edu/apa/apa_online.htm

or

http://www.bedfordstmartins.com/online/cite6.html

Cheating includes (but is not limited to) an attempt by one or more students to use unauthorized information in the taking of an exam; or knowingly to assist another student in obtaining or using unauthorized materials. Further specific delineation of academically dishonest behavior can be found in The Key: Student Handbook 2007-2008 (p. 46). If you have any doubts as to whether particular behavior would amount to cheating, please ask the instructor for clarification. Ignorance of the rules is not a valid defense.
CLASS MEETINGS:

Class meetings will be comprised of introductory and concluding comments from the instructor, lectures, video presentations, questions and discussions involving the whole class, and vigorous participation by students.

This format places some limits upon formal presentation by the instructor in order to maximize student engagement with the material. One requirement for this format to prove successful is that each student must come to each class prepared. That involves reading, studying, analyzing and often re-reading and re-analyzing materials before class. Inadequate preparation will virtually assure that much of what is said in the class, both by students and by the instructor, will make little sense.

You must also try to resist the temptation to discount the comments of your fellow students. The course is designed to give students the opportunity to articulate key concepts and criticisms. Many, if not most, of the important statements made in the class will be made by students. It is essential that you give the utmost respect to your classmates.

Also, keep in mind that in no case should any of the comments in the class be taken or directed personally. A college classroom is perhaps the singular place in our society where people gather for the purpose of giving deliberate and reasoned consideration to a wide range of views, including many of great controversy. Indeed, I encourage you to present views you may not necessarily agree with in order to explore and develop relevant themes or issues.

TEXTBOOKS:

There is one required textbook for this course:

Books are available at the KU Bookstore in the Student Union Building.

NEWSPAPER:

Students are also responsible for reading The New York Times for stories pertaining to civil liberties, civil rights and the United States Supreme Court.
